

Allies Bolt Truce Talks; Reds Called "Hypocrites"

MUNSAN, Korea (AP)—Allied negotiators today accused the Communists of "utter hypocrisy" and walked out of the Korean truce talks for a week.

Maj. Gen. William K. Harrison Jr., senior United Nations delegate, told the protesting Reds he would return Aug. 3.

"If you have anything worth saying (before Aug. 3) you can say it to our staff officers," Harrison declared.

The walkout ended the first open session at Panmunjom in three weeks. Eighteen off-the-record meetings since July 4 failed to break the deadlock over how to exchange prisoners of war—key obstacle to an armistice.

Staff Officers Meet

In Tokyo, Gen. Mark Clark, supreme Allied commander, said the closed sessions failed to produce results because the Communists "refused to recognize the inescapable fact that a large percentage of Communist prisoners refused flatly to go back to their former masters."

Before leaving the tent, Harrison agreed to a Red request for daily staff officer meetings "on the detailed wording of the draft armistice agreement."

Staff officers then met for 39 minutes and will meet again Sunday.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, the chief Communist negotiator, harangued the Allies for insisting that no prisoner be repatriated against his will.

"In these meetings," Harrison said, "we have been restrained in our statements and have tried to be accurately faithful. Your statements on the other hand, have demonstrated utter hypocrisy. You have said we want to retain your personnel. What we know, what the world knows as a fact, is that those prisoners are afraid to be returned as slaves to the tender mercies of Communist control."

Out Goes Barbering

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—Forward observers of an Allied unit on the Eastern Front spotted a small group of Communist soldiers yesterday in an outdoor "barber shop" just behind the front north-west of the Punchbowl.

One North Korean soldier was in the barber chair getting a haircut. Three others were waiting their turns.

A United Nations tank lobbed in one shell. The three waiting customers dove for a ditch. The second shell scored a hit.

Result no barber, no customer, and no chair.

FIREMEN USE THEIR 1ST AID AT FARM BLAZE

The Gettysburg Fire Department's first aid equipment, carried on the service truck, proved its worth again Friday afternoon when Mrs. Thomas Niblets, Gettysburg R. 4, was stricken during a fire which destroyed a large stone bank barn on a farm tenanted by her husband.

Firemen said Mrs. Niblets had been a sufferer with heart trouble, and in the excitement of the fire became unconscious. Members of the rescue squad and Fire Chief Donald G. Jacobs used first aid and the department's inhalator until the arrival of Dr. Wilbur Miller, New Oxford, who was summoned by the fire department's short wave radio.

Fire Chief Francis Staub of Bonneville today estimated the loss in the barn and shed fire at $15,000. The loss on the buildings was placed at $9,000, fully covered by insurance. Staub said Niblets estimated his loss on farm machinery and crops at $6,000, on which he said there was no insurance.

Woman Who Fled Battle Zone Will Be 96 Years Old Sunday

Many years ago, in fact it was the month of July, 1863, a little girl named Mary Barbehenn, who was not quite seven, was fleeing with her family from their home on South Washington St. seeking safety with relatives on the Baltimore Pike. A battle, one of the greatest in history, would soon be raging about them and Mary's mother felt that Gettysburg was not quite a safe place to be during those memorable days. There was a stream to cross some where beyond the town. Blue-coated men filled the woodlands and high ways bordering Gettysburg, blending with the mist-blue cornflowers covering the Pennsylvania meadows like a cloud.

Mary was too small to cross the stream. Suddenly from the nearby thicket appeared a tall soldier in blue who picked her up, carried her across and, before leaving, placed a kiss on her forehead with the words,

"I have a little girl at home just like you." Mary never saw the Yankee again but she never forgot the fact that a soldier, steeling himself for a great battle, stopped long enough to help a little girl across a stream.

Mary, who is now Mrs. J. A. Tawney, 115 Buford Ave., will be 96 Sunday. Born in Gettysburg July 27, 1856, she spent her early married life in Emmitsburg where her husband owned a bakery. Years later they returned to Gettysburg. Mr. Tawney is also 96 and both are in fair health.

The Tawneys had five children, two of whom are living. They are Mrs. Carrie Pretz, Buford Ave., and Mrs. Norman S. Wolf, Fairfield. There are also five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

A family dinner will be held at the home of Mrs. Pretz on Sunday in honor of the celebrant.

Here And There News Collected At Random

"Four score and seven years ago," Abraham Lincoln made a tiresome journey in a stuffy, slow-moving train to a small town in southern Pennsylvania. The next morning at the dedication of a military cemetery, he "made a few appropriate remarks" following a two-hour-long main speech delivered by the venerable orator Edward Everett. Lincoln spoke for only two minutes, and he said "the world will little note nor long remember what we say here," but the words he uttered there will live forever! It was Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg Address.

There have been many interpretations, and misinterpretations, of the writing, delivery and reception of that famous speech. Among the latter is the tale that the Great Emancipator "dashed off" the text of the address while enroute to Gettysburg. The fact is, there are in existence five versions written in Lincoln's own hand. After several weeks of mulling it over in his mind, he wrote the first draft in the White House. Revisions were made on the train and at the home of Judge Willis in Gettysburg where Lincoln spent the night. Then, on the morning of the 19th, before going to the cemetery, the President wrote his second draft of the eloquent oration. Three other copies were written afterwards. The final draft has become the authorized version and was penned by Lincoln from the copy he used at Gettysburg and from stenographic reports of his address.

Accounts of the manner in which Lincoln's words were received by the audience also vary greatly. Some stated that there was a "tumultuous outpouring," while others said there was "no applause of any kind." There can be no doubt that the listeners had mixed feelings. His extreme brevity shocked many of them. His sheer power, beauty and simplicity left others in a state of silent reverence.

Newspapers of the day for the most part, praised President Lincoln's masterful speech. One of them, The Chicago Tribune, was truly prophetic in this statement: "The dedicatory remarks by President Lincoln will live as long as the annals of man." And Edward Everett, in a note to Lincoln, wrote: "I should be glad if I could flatter myself that I came as near to the central idea (Please Turn to Page 7)

A Bit Of History About Your Own Adams County

This is the seventeenth in a series of historical talks given over Radio Station WGEB by Dr. Robert Fortenbaugh, Adeline Sager professor of history at Gettysburg College, on some of the outstanding events and interesting episode in the development of Adams County.

In a preceding article the story was told of how John Digges made his choice of land, some of which was in Adams County. As he received his grant under Maryland authority, and this grant was in what Pennsylvania claimed, a controversy followed which was at first peaceful, following legal processes. The preceding story traced the course of that controversy up to 1745, when Digges seems to have abandoned legal procedure and to have undertaken to enforce

TO DISTRIBUTE TREES, SHRUBS

During last fall about 80,000 shrubs were distributed and this spring 64,500 tree seedlings were handed out to farmers cooperating with the Adams County Soil Conservation District, it has been reported.

This fall, the Soil Conservation Service will again have a supply of trees and shrubs for distribution. The trees will probably include White Pine, Red Pine, Scotch Pine, Norway Spruce, White Spruce, Larch and a new strain of Black Locust. The list of shrubs will probably include Multiflora Rose, Silky Cornel, Tartarian Honeysuckle, Autumn Olive, Bush Spedezia, High-bush Cranberry and others.

Farmers, who wish to make plantings this fall, should contact the Soil Conservation Service in Gettysburg in the near future so that enough planting material can be ordered and make sure no one is missed because of late requests.

"Most every farmer realizes the importance of having a woodlot on his farm. Not only is it a source of fuelwood, fence posts and lumber to serve farm needs but if properly managed it can often add greatly to the farm income through the sale of pulpwood and timber. The benefits of woodlands serving as necessary environment to good production of farm wildlife is considered by many as enough reason for developing and maintaining woodlots," a district spokesman said.

During the spring and fall the Soil Conservation Service, working through the Adams County Soil Conservation District, has distributed tree seedlings for the establishment of woodlots on land which is not suited for farming because of soil condition and the distribution of shrubs for planting borders along woods, fence rows and stream banks for wildlife and erosion control.

RICE FAVORED STEVENSON

John S. Rice, West Broadway, delegate to the Democratic National Convention from this district, was one of the early backers of Stevenson for the nomination.

Rice was interviewed several times by a reporter for The Gettysburg Times prior to the primaries, after the selection of delegates and just before leaving for Chicago. In each instance he declined to publicly commit himself but confided to the reporter that his first and second choice was Governor Stevenson.

"I think Stevenson has the ability and the statesmanship and I believe that he can lead the Democrats to victory in November," Rice said. Rice did not speak adversely of the other candidates. He said "we have several very promising candidates, all able," but always added that he favored Stevenson.

Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson Of Illinois Wins Democratic Nomination On 3rd Ballot; Sparkman May Be V. P.

The Democratic Choice

GOVERNOR STEVENSON OF ILLINOIS

Pennsylvania Is Big Factor In Stevenson's Nomination

By CHARLES WELSH

CHICAGO (AP)—Pennsylvania today claimed a big share of credit in the nomination of Adlai Stevenson to be the Democratic candidate for the presidency.

It was Pennsylvania, in a surprise poll last Sunday night, that turned up a big bloc of genuine support for the governor to get the bandwagon rolling.

It was a Pennsylvanian, former U. S. Sen. Francis J. Myers, who served as convention floor leader of the Stevenson forces.

It was Pennsylvania votes that lit the explosive fuse on last night's third presidential roll call by massing a unanimous 70 ballots for the Illinois governor. That vote was the crusher to the last remaining hopes for other candidates.

Lawrence Lea Fight

And it was a Pennsylvanian, the "inside" story says, who was one of the two behind-the-scenes leaders in one of the most unique convention nomination drives in party history.

David L. Lawrence, mayor of Pittsburgh and veteran national committeeman from Pennsylvania wouldn't even admit to having had any big part in that, but many high Democratic leaders were shaking his hand and offering congratulations.

Lawrence and Illinois National Committeeman Jake Arvey, working quietly behind the scenes, were widely recognized as the directing force of the campaign that Myers led to success in the final vote.

The result was a nomination that appeared likely to leave few if any scars on the Democratic party in the Keystone State.

Many Liked Kefauver

Most of the Pennsylvanians backing Sen. Estes Kefauver had said long before the convention that they liked and admired Stevenson. Some even said he was their first choice, but they felt the party needed a willing candidate, or felt they were compelled to follow the results of the April primary.

The backers of President Truman and Averell Harriman had little reason to dissent. Both the President and the mutual security director had withdrawn from the race, and asked support for Stevenson.

But the convention wasn't all peace and harmony.

Just as the Pennsylvania Republicans had done here two weeks ago, the Pennsylvania Democrats managed to stir up some convention excitement.

Majority For Adlai

On the first ballot a name-by-name poll of the group was demanded by State Sen. Samuel G. Neff, chairman of the Pennsylvania Kefauver committee. It's result, strangely enough, enabled the Stevenson backers to note that a majority of the Pennsylvania delegation was with the Illinois governor on every ballot.

The recount provided two additional Stevenson votes, just enough to give the Illinois governor more than half of the Pennsylvania total. The Kefauver total stood still.

As state Sen. John H. Dent told a reporter later "we had two votes in waiting, just in case he tried to make a contest."

Then Neff challenged the vote of Philadelphia City Chairman James A. Finnegan on the ground that Finnegan—and 26 other delegates—had pledged in advance of their election to support the popular choice in the April 22 primary.

On that hot July night in 1948, Harry Truman belabored the 80th Congress for what he said it had done and had not done. Congress had adjourned, and Truman said, "I'm going to call 'em back and make 'em either do the work or admit to the people that they won't."

He was angry, that night, and spoiling for a fight with the Republicans. He vowed he would carry the battle to the people themselves, and—although optimism is a necessary facade in politics—he predicted he would win in November. By JACK BELL CONVENTION HALL, Chicago, (AP)—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson picks a running mate today to help him "talk sense to the American people" in the campaign to keep the presidency in Democratic hands.

The 52-year-old governor of Illinois, nominated on the third ballot in what President Truman described as "a real, honest to goodness draft," was reported having chosen Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama for the No. 2 place on the party ticket.

Aides said this choice was in line with the governor's determination to have a Southerner "to strengthen me and our party immeasurably in the hard, implacable work that lies ahead for all of us."

Pass Over Top 3

Passed over in this reported decision were:

Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia, who ran second to Stevenson in the final balloting but who says he is "uninterested" in the vice presidency.

Sen. Estes Kefauver, who had to give up his immediate dream of the White House on his 49th birthday. Said Kefauver: "I have never considered the vice presidency and am not now."

Vice President Alben Barkley, who at 74 was called too old by some labor union leaders for the presidential nomination and withdrew, but whose name still was entered in the unequal contest for top place.

Keynotes Campaign

Leaders called sleepy-eyed delegates back after only an eight-hour rest from their roaring reception of the party's new nominee in this smoke-bazed Convention Hall early this morning.

The Illinois governor, whose bandwagon rolled over Kefauver and Russell in tense convention balloting after W. Averell Harriman of New York had withdrawn, keyed his own campaign in his acceptance speech early today.

Asserting that the "bloodiest, most turbulent age of the Christian era is far from over, Stevenson declared:

Let's Talk Sense

"Sacrifice, patience, understanding and implacable purpose may be our lot for years to come. Let's face it. Let's talk sense to the American people."

It was not the usual recital of glowing promises of the future and laudatory references to the party's past record expected from most nominees.

Stevenson said he expects the Republicans will call the Democrats appeasers, the war party, reactionary and socialist. But he said he is not worried about GOP cries of "throw the rascals out."

Calls GOP "Hopeless Case"

"I am not too much concerned with partisan denunciation, epithets and abuse," he said, "because the working man, the farmer, the thoughtful business man, all know they are better off than ever before . . ."

Without naming the general directly, Stevenson said Eisenhower is "a leader whom we all respect, but who has been called upon to minister to a helpless case of political schizophrenia (split personality)" in attempting to hold the Republican party together.

Stevenson's talk contrasted sharply with the "give 'em hell" speech with which Truman assailed the Republicans in introducing the new standard bearer formally to the convention.

Truman To Help

Truman said the Republicans had tried to stop progress and they are at it again this year. Praising the Democratic platform, the President said his party is going to win again this year.

Applauding the choice of Stevenson, whom he helped along toward the nomination by getting Harriman to withdraw, Truman said he is going to "take my coat off and do everything I can" to help him.

Stevenson's nomination climaxed a day of slow and painful balloting during which Kefauver's fortunes rose only to crash to earth in an after-recess third ballot last night.

"People's Choice" Loses

Kefauver, who called himself the people's choice because he won most of the Democratic primaries, rolled to a high tide mark of 362½ votes on the second ballot.

At that point, Stevenson had reached 324½ votes, Russell had 294 and Harriman brought up the rear with 121.

A two-hour recess gave Truman, Jacob M. Arvey, Illinois national committeeman, and some other Stevenson backers time to bring up their heavy guns. Harriman went out of the race and broke open the New York delegation. That started things.

18-YEAR-OLD LEADS HERSHEY GOLF TOURNEY

By BEN FRENCH

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—An 18-year-old with the skill and nerves to become a great golfer led 30 qualifiers into today's finals of the 72-hole Pennsylvania Publix tournament.

Bob Schoener Jr., son of a Bethlehem professional, shot a one-under par 70 yesterday to become the fourth straight youngster to win the medal in the annual play. His 143 total gave him a two-stroke advantage over Frank Beley of Pittsburgh at the half-way mark.

Ex-State Champ

"I try to get out with the clubs every day I can," young Schoener said. "I've been playing for five years now and have hardly missed a day when the weather was right."

Schoener, the 1951 state high school champion, carded rounds of 76, 75, 73, 74 last year as he finished fifth among the state's pay-as-you-play golfers. His game was the most consistent of the nearly 150 entries.

Bob recorded his sub-par round—only one of the tourney to date—although he went over on the last two holes. He had picked up five birdies on the hilly Hershey Park course that is well-protected by a creek and trees.

While young Schoener was shooting his hot round, Eli Thomas of Carnegie, the first round leader, soared from 72 to 78 for a total of 150 that dropped him to fifth place.

formed him he would "be happy to accept the nomination." It was the first public word to that effect. Stevenson had insisted he wanted only to run for re-election in Illinois.

The handwriting was on the wall for all to see and members of the Fair Deal wing of the party hurried to Kefauver to get him to withdraw in Stevenson's favor.

This group, which included Gov. G. Mennen Williams and Sen. Blair Moody of Michigan, wanted the Stevenson nomination to come from—rather than be forced upon—their wing of the party.

Bailed By Rayburn

Kefauver consented to go to the Convention Hall. But instead of withdrawing in favor of Stevenson, he wanted to pull out of the race with an endorsement of Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois. Douglas then would say he couldn't run and urge Stevenson's selection.

Their plan for quick action was balked, however, when House Speaker Sam Rayburn, chairman of the convention, told Kefauver he would have to wait until the third ballot roll call was completed before he could be heard.

As the roll call went tediously on, Sen. Russell hurried to the hall. He saw the inevitable result as one state delegation after another toppled to Stevenson.

But Russell said he would stick to the end. And he wouldn't let his friends try to make any deal by which he could claim the vice presidential nomination.

YANKS BOW TO LOWLY TIGERS AS TRIBE WINS

By RALPH RODEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Cleveland Indians, counted out as a pennant threat early this week, are back in business once again.

When the league-leading New York Yankees dumped the Indians 7½ games off the pace by sweeping a doubleheader Tuesday, it looked like curtains for the Tribe.

But rigor-mortis failed to set in. The Indians bounced back, knocking the Yanks off twice. Last night they whipped Washington, 4-2, and took over third place from the Senators 4½ games behind New York and only ½ game back of second place Boston.

Yanks Bow To Tigers
The Yanks, meanwhile, suffered their third straight loss as they bowed to the Tigers in Detroit, 2-1. The Red Sox remained four games astern of the Bombers by dropping a 3-2 squeaker to the St. Louis Browns. The Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago White Sox divided a two-night doubleheader, the White Sox winning the opener, 5-0, and the A's the second game, 5-4.

In the National League, the New York Giants defeated Cincinnati, 3-1, in the major's only day game and climbed to within 5½ games of Brooklyn's pace-setting Dodgers. The St. Louis Cardinals trounced the Dodgers, 8-4, while in other games, Pittsburgh shaded Boston, 3-2, and Chicago belted Philadelphia, 8-3.

11th Victory For Wynn
Early Wynn allowed the Senators only six hits in besting Bob Porterfield. Wynn blanked Washington after the first inning in hanging up his fifth victory. Home runs by Jim Hegan and Larry Doby featured Cleveland's seven hit attack.

Former Yankee Steve Souchock homered in the ninth on Bob Kuzava's first pitch to fracture a leg and beat his old mates. The Browns nudged rookie Bob Brodowski for only three hits but they bunched two of them along with two walks in the seventh inning to beat the Red Sox.

Pierce Blanks A's
Billy Pierce blanked the A's on seven hits in the first game and helped his own cause by contributing two singles and a double to Chicago's 12-hit attack. Pierce fanned six and took over the league strikeout lead from the A's Bobby Shantz, 101-99.

Jim Hearn was the whole show in the Giants triumph over Cincinnati. Hearn limited the Reds to four hits and won his own game with a two-run homer in the fifth off Ken Raffensberger. Tempers flew in the Cardinal-Dodger game. In the first inning Solly Hemus of the Cards and pitcher Johnny Van Cuyk of the Dodgers exchanged punches after Hemus slid hard into third base which was covered by Van Cuyk.

3 Dodgers Ejected
Later, Van Cuyk twice hit Hemus with pitched balls. Van Cuyk also was forced to bite the dust in the fourth when pitcher Joe Presko of the Cards threw a pitch high and inside. The Dodgers claimed Van Cuyk was hit by the pitch but Umpire Frank Secory ruled the ball had struck his bat. The Dodgers protested violently and bench warmers Clem Labine, Ralph Branca and Roy Campanella were ejected. Van Cuyk suffered a contusion on his left index finger and was forced to retire.

The Cards snapped a 4-4 tie in the seventh when relief pitcher Ed Yuhas doubled home the run. The Red Birds sewed it up with three more in the ninth off loser Johnny Schmitz.

Warren Hacker coasted to his eighth victory for Chicago. Hacker restricted Philadelphia to six hits. The Cubs pounced on Curt Simmons for seven runs in three innings to lock it up.

Johnny Merson singled home Ralph Kiner in the fourth inning with the Pirates winning run at Boston. Murry Dickson blanked the Braves on five hits after the first inning to best Warren Spahn.

HELSINKI (P)—The United States gained four points Friday in its struggle to overtake Russia in the unofficial team standings of the Olympics games.

Russia still holds a wide first-place lead of 363½ points to 250, with almost 200 of its points garnered in men's and women's gymnastics.

In Friday's events the United States scored 29 points to 25 for Russia. The 29 was high for any country today.

Olympic officials do not recognize any point-scoring system. However, by custom, a system of 10 points for each gold medal and 5-4-3-2-1 for the next five places has grown up.

Thirty-seven of the 70 nations competing have scored points. The totals of the top ten through the first seven days of competition—60 separate events:

Interstate
By The Associated Press
A weekend series between Allentown and Wilmington heads a busy Interstate League schedule. The series should further test whether the Cardinals or any other team can challenge the Hagerstown Braves' drive for the 1952 league pennant.

Hagerstown, despite a 5-4 defeat in a 10-inning game with seventh-place Sunbury last night, leads the league by five and a half games.

Allentown has climbed from an uncertain position midway in the league to a strong second place.

Wilmington, former second-place holder now in a month-long slump rose to the occasion last night and outslugged Lancaster, 16-15, to regain fourth. Allentown knocked off Salisbury 9-0 as Bobby Hoch extended his undefeated record to 11 wins.

In the other league encounter York kept its grip on third place with a 4-1 win over last place Harrisburg.

ANOTHER GOLD MEDAL MAY BE EARNED TODAY AT HELSINKI

By BEN PHLEGAR
HELSINKI (P)—The United States looks a cinch to win at least one gold medal in today's Olympic track and field events and the way things have been going here a second victory would not be too surprising.

The certainty is in the decathlon where Bob Mathias, Tulare, Calif., superman, holds a lead of 256 points after the first five events.

The chance is in the 1,500 meters (metric mile), probably the most universally popular foot race on the entire track program.

Ashefelter An Outsider
Trailing Mathias are two other Americans — Milton Campbell of Plainfield, N. J., and Floyd Simmons of Charlotte, N. C.
On form, the United States should figure itself lucky to get a man in the first six in the 1,500. But two U. S. entries — Warren Dreutzler of La Grange, Ill., and Bob McMillen of Los Angeles — must be considered.

Being ranked among pre-event outsiders has not bothered the Americans so far. Few people expected FBI agent Horace Ashefelter to place in the 3,000-meter steeplechase. He admitted to being a novice and the field included Vladimir Kazantsev, who had the world's best time.

U.S.S.R. Still In Lead
But Ashefelter matched the Russian stride for stride yesterday and then left him in the lurch in the final 150 meters to win going away in 8:45.4, the fastest time the race ever has been run.

The former Penn State star's triumph and American victories in the javelin and 100 meters were so unexpected that anything Dreutzler or McMillen can accomplish in the 1,500 will be accepted as a matter of course.

But despite America's surprise triumphs, Russia still holds a commanding lead in the over-all point score. The score today is Russia 363.5, with almost 200 points earned in men and women's gymnastics, and the United States 250. Hungary is far back in third place with 110.

Basketball Road Tough
Basketball, which has grown from a Massachusetts' peach basket to a world-wide sport, started its third Olympic run yesterday. It was first played in the Olympics in 1936. The United States won it both then and in 1948 by overpowering margins. But the road may be tougher this time.

Russia, France and Argentina all showed powerful quintets in first round victories yesterday while the giant United States crew seemed sluggish and off form.

With the chips down, however, the U. S. should win handily but games against these other three outfits could be corkers.

The VFW softball team, with Clarence Dorn beating Meyers in a hurling duel via a two-hitter, blanked the Eagles 7-0 in Friday evening's opening league game to gain a tie for second place.

A double play by the Vets, Staub to Roth, with runners on first and third, smothered the Eagles' only scoring threat in the third frame. The Vets clinched the game with four runs in the second on walks to Greiner and Kebil, fielders' choices on grounders by Roth and Dorn, and singles by Little and Fazenbaker. Two more Vets' runs came in the sixth on a triple by Staub, single by Greiner, a fielder's choice, error, and single by Little.

A seven-run spurge in the fourth inning which overcame a 4-1 deficit enabled the Lentz Legion to cap an 8-6 thriller from the Elks in the nightcap.

Smith, hurler for the Elks, gave up but five hits while McGaughlin, Legion pitcher, yielded six.

Eastern League
By The Associated Press
Today was no time for Eastern League sluggers to hit the front office for a raise.

All but the Binghamton Triplets were trying to forget last night's frustrating pitchers' picnic of scoreless innings and scattered hits.

The triplets trounced the league-leading Albany Senators, 7-3, with a 15-hit onslaught in the opener of a four-game series at home.

The rest of the league combined produced only 10 runs and 49 hits in four games, two of which went extra innings.

The Schenectady Blue Jays nipped the Hartford Chiefs, 1-0, in 11 innings. The Reading Indians took two from the Williamsport Tigers, 3-2 and 1-0. The nightcap was a 10-inning affair. The Scranton Miners halted the Elmira Pioneers, 2-1.

The Egyptians made keys and locks entirely of wood.

Marciano Eager For Fight With Matthews

GREENWOOD LAKE, N. Y. (P)—Straining for the sound of the bell that will cut him loose against Harry Matthews Monday night at Yankee Stadium, Rocky Marciano today winds up his training camp work.

Nobody is tipping his hand on the battle plan of the unbeaten Brockton, Mass., slugger with 36 knockout victories in 41 fights. But there is a strong suspicion that he will come out winging from the first bell, shooting for an early crusher.

The winner gets Jersey Joe Walcott for the world heavyweight championship in September. But the winner will be more attractive if he is an early knockout winner.

ASHENFELTER NOT SUPPOSED TO BE IN EVENT

HELSINKI (P)—FBI Agent Horace Ashefelter of Glen Ridge, N. J., today holds the Olympic record for the steeplechase, an event he wasn't expected to enter.

The 29-year-old distance runner beat out Vladimir Kazantsev of Russia in a terrific last lap battle yesterday.

Ashefelter's time of 8:54.4 is the fastest the steeplechase has ever been run. It would be a new world record if there were such a thing, but steeplechase courses vary so that no comparison between them is possible. But nobody has ever run a 3,000-meter obstacle course as fast as Ashefelter did yesterday.

beat out Vladimir Kazantsev of Russia in a terrific last lap battle yesterday.

Ashefelter has run the steeplechase only a half dozen times in his life. His specialty is the 10,000 meter run. But he felt he could take the steeplechase if he concentrated on learning to take the water jump, the toughest hazard on the course.

The water jump consists of a fence about three feet high, with a sloping front with a shallow pool of water 10 feet wide in back of it. The usual method of attack in taking the water jump is to scramble over the fence, jump down and splash through the water, all of which is time-consuming. Ashefelter learned to leap up to the top of the fence and jump from there across the water to dry land.

Russians Gave Up
And it was the water jump that gave the federal agent his victory and the record. Running neck and neck with Kazantsev up to the jump on the last lap, Ashefelter took it in his snappy style while the Russian scrambled over it awkwardly. When Kazantsev got through the water he was five meters behind and he gave up.

Ashefelter is a wiry dark man, weighing 145 pounds and standing 5 feet 10 inches tall. He won national collegiate titles while at Penn State and National A. A. U. titles after graduating in 1949 but he was never considered in a class with the Europeans, who shine in the steeplechase.

After collecting his medal yesterday the Air Force veteran said, "I thought this was my best chance to win an event in the Olympics."

Ashefelter's last lap time was :68.6, an excellent time for a sprint man running on the flat. Ashefelter did it on the seventh lap after running almost two miles while clearing four three-foot hurdles and the water jump. He was behind Kazantsev at the beginning of the lap, caught and passed him at the water jump and finished 100 meters ahead.

Today's Talk
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
REFUGE OF UNDERSTANDING
Instead of running away from life when you leave your occupation, for a spell of quiet and change, you run into life! It's then that you come face to face with yourself. You see yourself in the light, especially when that change is one that leads you into nature. There is scattered wisdom all about you when you become a guest of Nature.
We need, periodically, to get alone with ourselves, that we may delve into our inner resources and learn to understand why it is that we are put into this world, what we should do, and how we should think and act so as to make the best of life, and prove ourselves worthy as God's guests here upon this earth.
How little we know about how rightly to live and to order our lives. The birds know how; so do the animals. They seek no advice. We, who have a mind and soul, blunder with our intelligence and wealth of opportunity. The single flower, budding and blooming in the forest, valley, or mountain top, furnishes us with an example of solitary silence, as it gives beauty and fragrance in its brief existence. Everything has a purpose.

Self-forgetfulness can introduce us into many a new world about which we never even dreamed before. Simple pleasures tell us most, and help more than we realize, to accept temporary defeat, sorrow, or disappointment. We need escapes in our lives. We need silent communion with nature. It sweeps out the dross in our minds, and gives us spiritual contacts with ideas and experiences that open up our understanding, putting us akin to all those about us. There are welcome on every hand to the searching mind.
When we have learned to live happily with ourselves, all mankind belongs to us. There is unity to the scheme of life. We are not alone. We enter a universal understanding. It becomes our happiest of refuges!

YOUNG AIRLINE PILOT CALLED AERIAL WHIZ

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Don't what comes naturally" has paid off handsomely for "Sonny, the junior birdman" of Pan-American Airways. In real life he is Rodney Coston, 19-year-old Arkansas aerial whizz-kid and the world's youngest major airline pilot.

Even in the young man's field of aviation, Rodney is young for the job he holds as second officer on a Pan-American Clipper flying the San Francisco to Manila route. He's a veteran with more than 2,000 hours of logged time in the air to his credit, and with probably close to that much more unlogged because he was too young to hold a license.

Came Up Hard Way
What's more, he's a pilot who has come up the hard way, flying all sorts of light planes, and doing aerial odd jobs, including hopped-up crop-dusters, without ever having an accident. Rod's career as a flier started when he was 12 in Malvern, Ark.

The "sonny" and "junior birdman" tags were hung on second officer Coston when he made his first flight across the Pacific. As he was preparing to board the plane at Honolulu, a stewardess, looking down from her superior age of 23, greeted him: "Hello, Sonny. How's our junior birdman?"

"I expect to wait a long time until I get to be a first officer or command a Clipper," Coston said. "But I didn't expect to be 'Junior' to all the stewardesses on the airline."

Absorbed With Aviation
Rodney's absorption and interest in aviation became apparent back in Malvern at the family dinner table. So when he was reported missing from school, his mother, Mrs. Albert Coston, simply called the local airport. Rodney, of course, was there, having skipped school to wash airplanes and help around the hangars.

One day when Rodney was 13 the manager of the local airport called him into the office. "You've been hanging around here a lot," he said. "It's time you dug in and made yourself useful." He reached into a drawer and handed the boy a pair of white coveralls. Rod's career was made and so was his hero. Now at the mature age of 19 he staunchly maintains that the airport manager, Gura Lashlee, is the greatest aviation instructor who ever lived.

But then he was still 13 and couldn't get a license for another four years. So the white coveralls were put to work cleaning planes, handing tools to the mechanics and doing all sorts of handy jobs—in addition to spending every possible minute in a cockpit, either on the ground or in the air.

Fell In Love
Meantime the young airman went to high school, earned letters in basketball and wrestling and fell in love with a girl he had met in the freshman play.

Mrs. Coston resigned herself to her son's flying, but the father, who had never been in a plane, held steadfastly against the "whole foolish business."

But on his 17th birthday, when Rodney "checked out" for his license at the airport, both mother and father were on hand to see him. Mrs. Coston took the first ride with her son as a licensed pilot and the boy's father took the second flight, after extracting a promise "to fly low and slow."

Crop-Dusting Job
For the next year the most familiar phrase in the language of Rodney was, "Sorry, son. You're too young." Finally he landed a job flying a crop-dusting plane. He spent up to 10 hours a day in the cockpit over the Arkansas cotton fields.

Meantime, the freshman-play romance had continued to blossom and Rodney decided when he was 19 it was time to get married, which brought on a family crisis only second to his determination to be a church. The Rev. Howard S. Fox officiated.

Miss Ruth Spangler presided at the console.

Miss Blair was given in marriage by her uncle, Herman Boyer. Miss Mary Blair was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Vance Hershey, Miss Mildred Boyer, Miss Margaret Kaufman and Miss Kathleen Strausbaugh.

Ralph Maley was the best man. The ushers were Robert Maley, William Weaver, James Moore, Sr., and James Moore, Jr.

Thoroughbred Breed Steadily Improves

NEW YORK (AP)—In this modern age of speed, a good horse can win more money in one afternoon than some of the turf's immortals made in a life time. And, according to the stop watch, the thoroughbred of today is a much faster animal.

In 1869, it took Narragansett 1:17 1/2 to establish a record for six furlongs. That same distance is covered today in 1:12 by undistinguished claiming horses. The six furlong record today is 1:08 1/5 set by Bolero on May 27, 1950.

A horse named Herzog had set a standard of 1:43 1/2 for a mile in 1869. Today the record is 1:33 3/5 set by Citation in 1950. Many horses today can run a mile under 1:40.

Incidentally, Narragansett's record for the mile and a quarter was 2:10. Today ordinary horses run the distance in 2:05. The record by Noor in 1950 is 1:58 1/5.

FIRST START IS WINNER
CHICAGO (AP)—Warren Hacker of the Cubs made his first start of the 1952 season June 7 after 10 relief appearances. It was against the Braves. When the smoke of battle had cleared Hacker was the winner by a 9-3 score. Hank Sauer's 13th homer of the year was a lucky one for Hacker as it helped win the game.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir:

A new constitutional form of government went into effect Friday in the Island of Puerto Rico. The island becomes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. The new constitution was ratified by Congress of the United States last July 3.

On July 25th, 1898, the first American contingent of troops landed at the port of Guanica on the Caribbean coastline of the Island of Puerto Rico shortly after the outbreak of the Spanish American War, under the leadership of General Miles. Only a few weeks later, the Island was ceded to the United States government by the Spanish Crown together with her antipodes, the Philippine Islands, by the Treaty of Paris of 1898. The final status of the Philippines was settled by our Federal Government, and their full independence granted after ten years of trial in independent government. Friday, July 25, 1952, the Island of Puerto Rico changed her so-called territorial status for that of THE COMMONWEALTH OF PUERTO RICO, El Estado Libre Asociado de Puerto Rico, which translated literally means, The Associated Free State of Puerto Rico. It all amounts to a form of government quite similar to that of Canada in relation to the mother country, Great Britain.

The islanders have undergone through a period of fifty-four years training in democratic government. The first civil law of the island was the FORAKER ACT (1900-17), then a more liberal Organic Law, the JONES ACT, went into effect on March 2nd, 1917, at which time the Puerto Ricans became full-plledged citizens of the United States.

The new Constitution was enacted by the Puerto Rican Constitutional Convention which met from Sept. 17th, 1951, to Feb. 6th, 1952. The draft of the Constitution was next submitted to a referendum of the Puerto Rican electors at a special general election, and ratified last March 3rd, by an overwhelming majority. It was then submitted to Congress of the United States. Congress approved of it last June, and then sent to the President of the United States for his signature. The new Constitution was signed by the President, last July 3rd.

Governor Luis Munoz Marin will proclaim the New Constitution to the People of Puerto Rico today, July 25th, 1952.

This marks the beginning of a new era in the history of the Island of Puerto Rico, and a new step in its march along the way of democratic government under the leadership of the United States of America.

GI RAILROADER GOES BEHIND IRON CURTAIN

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—The portly man handed his travel orders to the major and asked anxiously: "There won't be any shooting, will there?"

Maj. Charles Woerple smiled and motioned the man aboard the Berliner, waiting on the track for the highball toward the Iron Curtain. "Nothing to worry about," he said. "It's just another train ride."

As the man swung aboard, Woerple's smile broadened to a grin. "We get 'em like that sometimes," he said. "They think a trip to Berlin is like traveling through the jaws of death."

Unusual Train
Maj. Woerple runs one of the most unusual trains in the world. Its passengers must have orders written in Russian to ride it under American protection through the East German countryside.

Maj. Woerple is a pretty old hand at traveling himself. He went through World War II in the 32nd Division, where he won the Silver Star, Bronze Star, and a couple of Purple Hearts in the South Pacific. Later he came to Europe and became rail transport officer. Now he's deputy chief of the rail transport section here, and sees that military trains are run by the book.

The Berliner gives him his odd-job. Since it traverses 100 miles of the Russian Zone of Germany, the Russians take a proprietary interest in it. They keep a close check on the passenger lists.

Americans Check Too
The Americans keep their own close check, too. From the time the Berliner leaves either end of its run, the train is sealed. Two military policemen, a baggage guard, and a train commander keep things under control.

Military personnel, their dependents, high commissioners' employees and some tourists with good connections, can obtain orders to ride the Berliner.

The Berliner's big stop is at Helmstedt-Marienborn, where the Russian Zone begins. There the train commander drops off with an interpreter and hands over a copy of the passenger list to a stolid Russian officer.

Lt. Ronald D. Smith of Lakotah, N. D., is one train commander who can give and take with the Russians. At Helmstedt the Communist loud-speakers often play American jazz records, heavily larded with anti-American propaganda speeches.

"I just stroll down the platform and listen," Lt. Smith says. "This always makes the Russians nervous. They figure I ought to get mad at speeches calling us war mongers. I pretend I like the music and it really throws them guys."

Icy Politeness
The Russians treat the American military crew with icy politeness and for more than a year have not made any trouble. Sometimes Russian military police talk to their U. S. opposite numbers.

Most annoyances riding the Berliner come from inside the train. Maj. Woerple and his men sometimes have trouble with the Saturday night funster who sneaks a bottle aboard. Drinking on the Berliner is prohibited. There is also the railroad romantic who finds the rules of sex segregation obnoxious. He is dealt with summarily.

Maj. Woerple and his assistants are like the skipper of a liner at sea—they are in complete charge and, if necessary, can tell a general what not to do.

Box Rejoins Lions After Marine Duty

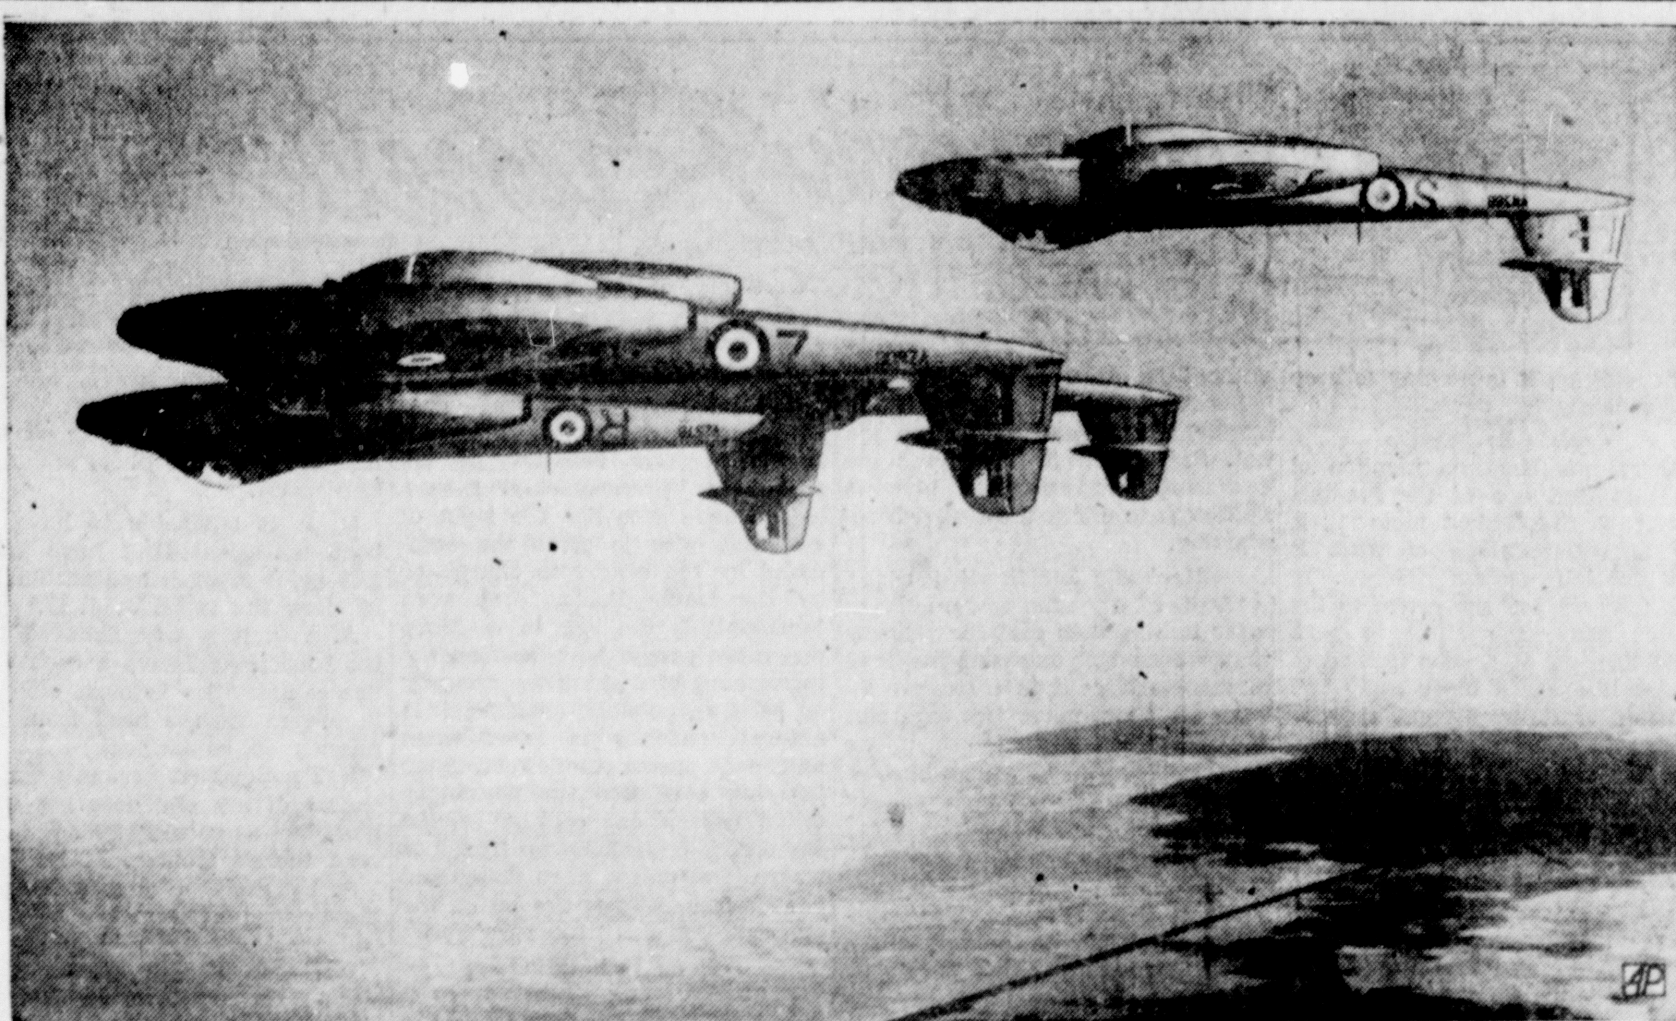

DETROIT (AP)—Cloyce Box, one of the top pass-catching ends in the National Football League, is back with the Detroit Lions. Box signed his contract recently after being discharged from the Marines.

The six feet, five inch, 220-pound star was recalled to active service at the conclusion of the 1950 pro season. Six of his past ten years have been in the service of Uncle Sam.

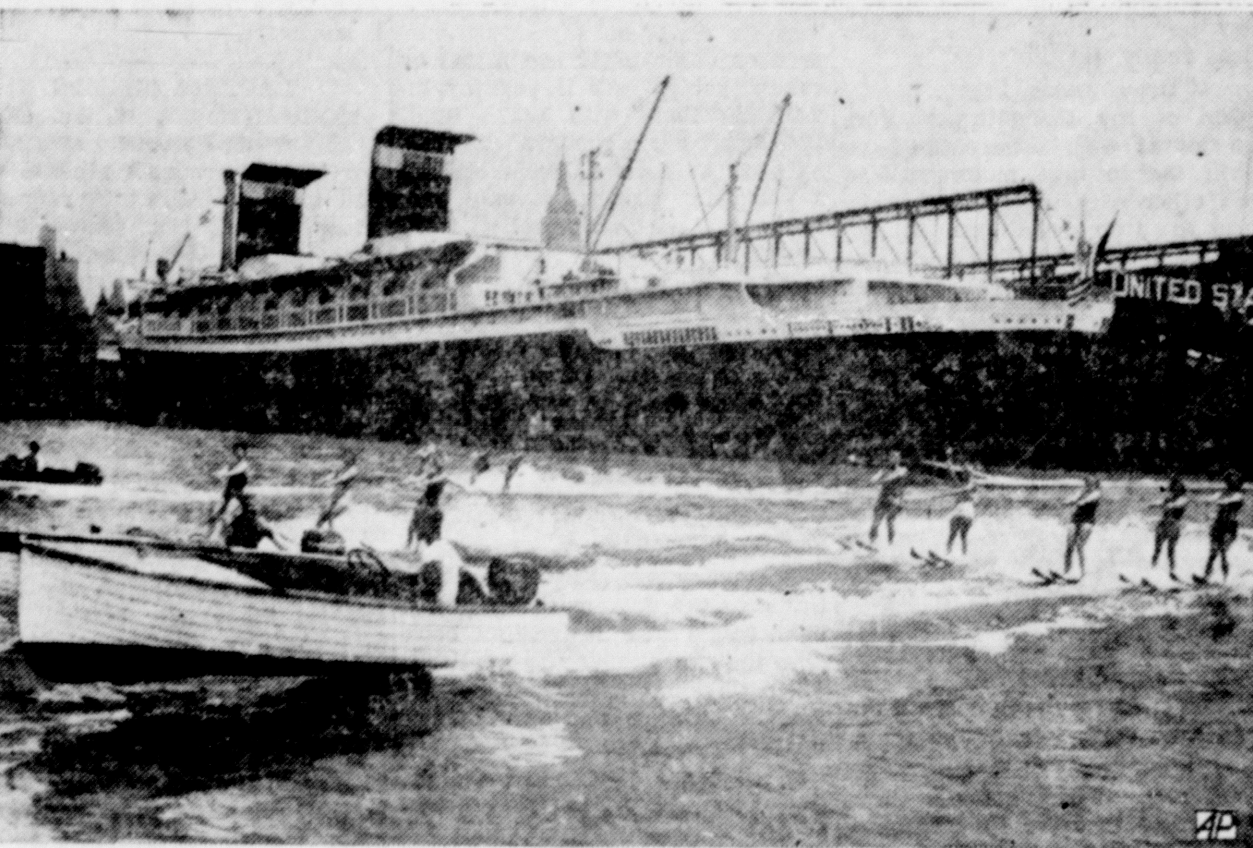

Said Box, "I'm in great shape. I played lots of football last season, working for a high school coach who does not know the way of the pros. He scrimmaged us at least four days a week."

GROWING LATE CABBAGE

July 1 to 10 is generally considered the latest safe date-line for setting out cabbage plants in this latitude. However, year after year gardeners report that they have set out vigorous plants as late as July 20 and still harvested fully matured heads before cold weather. Perhaps safety suggests this week as a wise and practical final planting date for the 1952 crop of late cabbage.

Cabbage is an economical and healthful food crop to grow for winter. It is economical because it may be easily stored in cool cellars and basements, buried in outdoor mounds, or made into sauerkraut and stored in any cool part of the house or basement. That cabbage is one of the most healthful vegetables is widely known. Not only should the family eat sauerkraut frequently over winter but human bodies need the vitamins and minerals, also the bulk, which cabbage furnishes. Cooked cabbage should be served often and raw (uncooked) cabbage should occupy a prominent place in winter diets in the form of vegetable salads and slaws. Surplus heads may very profitably be fed to poultry as a source of essential green feed from fall until spring brings back green vegetation.

Two main facts should be emphasized in starting late cabbage at this time. First, well rooted plants should be obtained in order that no time be lost with puny, poorly rooted plants getting started after transplanting. Second, late cabbage should be irrigated whenever the soil lacks sufficient moisture to keep the plants growing steadily.

If late cabbage follows an earlier vegetable that was heavily fertilized, little additional preparation will be necessary. In about a week after transplanting the plants should be side dressed with nitrate of soda. In fact, two or three such side dressings will greatly hasten growth where the soil is at the same time kept moist.

In case no irrigation of late cabbage is possible, mulching the soil heavily with grass, straw or other fine vegetation will conserve moisture and eliminate the labor of cultivation to control weeds and grass. However, watering the plants once a week during rainless periods is a profitable investment of labor. Water should be allowed to run along the rows in shallow furrows rather than applied as light sprinklings.

Plant lice and green caterpillars are the only insect enemies likely to bother late cabbage. Because they are light green in color and difficult to detect against the pale green of young cabbage foliage, cabbage aphids should be sought by careful inspection. They may be killed off with a prompt application of Black Leaf 40 in soapy water. Caterpillars are easily controlled by dusting or spraying with rotenone, preferably by an application of rotenone dust sold ready to apply.

Because cabbage is not injured by light frosts, it is an ideal crop to occupy and "keep busy" the late garden. Burial is simple for supplies not needed for sauerkraut making. Heads may be taken up by roots and set upside down or cut from the stalks and piled in conical heaps. In either case they are covered lightly with straw or dry leaves and then coated with sufficient soil to prevent their later freezing.

RYE FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Farmers who plan and practice long-range soil improvement measures must know the benefits of green manure crops. Most soils lack organic matter (decayed vegetation). One of the economical ways to build up this vital property in run-down soils is to grow and turn under a heavy green crop, such as clover, alfalfa, soybeans, cowpeas, oats, wheat, rye or other cereal. But the home gardener cannot always adopt the farmer's broader-scale methods to his limited area. It is for meeting these modest needs that we discuss rye as a means of lasting soil improvement.

Three years ago the editor began soil-improvement tests on a small tract of worn-out land that is part of the Bull Run battlefield in Virginia. This area was grown up in dense pine underbrush and had lain idle for approximately fifty years after it had been "corned to death." There was no more than a thin layer of heavy clay loam over a stratum of red clay hardpan. What we have accomplished in these experiments may help gardeners and small farmers everywhere.

After the land was cleared and plowed in late August, lime was applied to neutralize the acidity and about 400 pounds of 5-10-5 fertilizer per acre was broadcast and disked in. On two test plots rye was seeded. The green crop was turned under on No. 1 plot the next April and the area planted to potatoes, snap beans, beets and other general vegetables. Rye on the second plot was allowed to mature and fall down to form a substantial ground cover. Both plots were disked in late August and reseeded to rye and the same treatment repeated the next spring.

Now in the third summer we find that the soil where the rye was allowed to ripen and fall down to be disked in in August is in some respect in better tith than where the green manure was turned under. However, it is evident that the green manure has given the soil a better moisture-holding capacity, although potatoes growing on both plots show a decided greater vigor where the rye was allowed to mature. Apparently the decaying rye roots have added more humus to the soil than is generally deemed possible.

Too, we have tested rye seeded at various times of the year for soil improvement and find that seedlings made in early spring, early summer, and at the normal seeding time of late August all furnish valuable green manure. This versatility suggests that gardeners may "run in" an emergency crop of green manure rye whenever they find a particular area suitably idle.

Rye may be wisely seeded in mid-August to improve soils for starting bramble fruits, asparagus, rhubarb and other crops which must be planted in late winter and early spring. For the regular garden rye may be seeded even as late as late September and still make excellent top growth by the time the soil must be plowed or spaded the following April. The important fact is not so much when the rye is sown for growing a green manure supply but that the gardener aim seriously to obtain at least one supply or green organic matter every two or three years until his soil is deep, mellow and fertile.

MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE MENACE

Judging by letters from readers, the Mexican bean beetle has swarmed back this year in unprecedented numbers and with more-than-normal hunger for garden beans. Since this pest migrated into northern gardens over two decades ago, if we can estimate its ravages by the seriousness of reports from readers, no single season has seen such heavy damages from its feeding. What is the remedy?

Unlike the Japanese beetle which is believed to be diminishing in numbers because of parasites and other natural agencies of death, the Mexican bean beetle is relatively free from such means of control. Combat is mainly on the basis of human efforts. There is not nearly so much assistance rendered by birds in reducing the bean enemy as occurs with other major insect pests. And of course, with man holding the balance of power in the battle of control, the bean beetle enjoys that immeasurable factor of neglect and carelessness.

Perhaps the most costly mistake citizens make in meeting the menace of the bean beetle is their failure to recognize it as a community-wide foe. To illustrate, the adult female beetle may fly as much as two miles in a day to deposit her eggs on bean foliage, although it is probable that travel averages no more than a few hundred yards generally. Thus, in a community, where all gardeners—excepting one—pursue a careful and strict program of prevention, several score gardens may suffer infestation from the neglected garden of the single non-cooperator.

Steps in prevention on a neighborhood or communitywide scale must include at least four practices:

1. Clean up and burn or plow under deeply before winter all bean refuse.
2. Inspect garden beans daily after the first beetles are seen and crush all masses of beetle eggs.
3. Encourage birds to nest and rear their young near gardens.
4. Organize, preferably in winter, so all gardeners in the community will cooperate in these measures and particularly in direct combat.

Direct combat consists of killing the beetles and their young in wholesale numbers throughout the season. On this subject several terse suggestions are in order. They are:

Do not experiment with hearsay, "sure-cure" remedies. They rarely, if ever, work.

As soon as beetles or larvae appear, begin spraying infested beans with rotenone or dusting with already prepared rotenone powder.

It is a complete waste of time and insecticides merely to coat the top surfaces of the leaves. This pest is killed only when the under sides of the leaves are uniformly coated.

Rotenone spray is not made from the powder sold already mixed for application as a dust. It is usually sold under trade names and should be prepared according to directions on the container.

Dust or spray should be repeated as often as necessary to keep the beetles and larvae killed off.

There is no danger to human life or health from eating green beans dusted or sprayed with rotenone.

Again, don't experiment; it usually results in crop losses.

"Satch is tough," claims Johnson "because he fools around out there so much. A catcher gives him a signal, he fiddles around, takes his time, gives it a howdy-do and by the time he actually pitches, Satch has forgotten what the catcher signalled."

PECK CAPTURES ROME WITHOUT FIRING A SHOT

By JERRY QUIGG

ROME (P)—As one woman to another I've just had what we've all wanted: A whole day with that Gregory Peck.

His pretty wife came along, too, darn the luck!

So did a few thousand Roman film fans who mobbed us at every stop asking for autographs—his, not mine. Not even his wife's.

The tall he-man film star is here for the summer to play a leading role as a foreign correspondent in "Roman Holiday."

Foreign correspondents I see every day around the office—but not Gregory Peck. He brought his wife and three children, and enrolled the children in an Italian summer school.

"They like to have something to do, too," he explained.

Haven't we all wondered if he could possibly be all that the movies make him appear?

Well—he just about is.

We set off to see Rome on his first day of sightseeing in the city they call eternal.

Instead it was infernal—with Rome's blasting early summer heat.

Was Regular Tourist

I was warm enough. But Gregory sported a dark blue jacket and gray slacks—and seemed cool and crisp all day long.

Not that he was the frosty type. He really enjoyed the day. When we got to the jagged silhouette of the ancient Colosseum he piled out of the horse-drawn carriage as eager as any first-day tourist.

"Pictures," said he. And he pulled out a couple of cameras.

He insisted on posing his wife at half a dozen angles for shots with the Colosseum background and asked me to get some of him too.

It was tourist-style photography, and both he and his wife were liking every minute of it.

Not that it was easy—either at the Colosseum, the 2,000-year-old Roman forum, or anywhere else we stopped.

There always seemed to be people—and they all recognized him.

"Gregory Peck!" girls cried. "Gregory Peck!" shouted elderly dames.

And they all flocked around with notebooks and pens for autographs.

Signs And Smiles

It was a bit wearing to a gal having a "whole day with Gregory." But he did not seem to get tired of it at all. He signed and signed and smiled and joked.

And through a whole day which would have worn out a couple of politicians, he never wilted.

Only at lunch-time did he "shy" a little, suggesting:

"Let's eat in some quiet place."

That was easier said than done. We found a place that was quiet when we got there. But by the time the film star was well into his big plate of spaghetti the waiters were beaming, the other customers were smiling and nodding—and autograph collectors were hurrying to the scene.

All the same, it was something!

Boy Scouts of the local Catholic parish have been assisting the men of their church in preparations for receiving the seasonal block collection for the benefit of parish expenses. The actual collection will take place in mid-August.

Another canvass of the parish will be made shortly by the Rev. Robert D. Hartnett, pastor, with the assistance of Paul Miller, who is studying at a seminary for the priesthood. The purpose of the canvass is to revise the census of parishioners.

No improvement is reported in the condition of Floyd E. Rightmire, who has been in a critical condition at the Hanover Hospital for several weeks since suffering a heart attack at his home. Mr. Rightmire, whose sons have returned to army duty after emergency leaves to visit him during the earlier part of his illness, has been in an oxygen tent since entering the hospital. The patient's son-in-law, C. William Noel, has been confined to his home this week with a severe attack of ivy poisoning which has affected his arms, face and eye.

On Sunday services at the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church will be in charge of Msgr. Mulcahy, who is also here to promote the Mission Cooperative drive to obtain necessary means to provide religious attention and catechetical instruction to persons along the Susquehanna River in the Liverpool area, where there have been no convenient Catholic churches or schools for many years.

Her father, who is 83, is in fairly good health at present although unable to leave his home and suffering impaired vision. Mr. Burgard's son, Charles W. Burgard, with his wife, York, also formerly of here, visited here over the week end.

PRICE READY FOR ACTION

NEW YORK (P)—Eddie Price, champion ground gainer of the National Football League, has signed with the New York Giants and is ready to pick up where he left off last season. Price is the Iron Man fullback who in 1951 carried the ball more often than any player in NFL history. The former Tulane ace rushed 271 times for 971 yards. A 70-yard run which was nullified by an offside penalty, prevented Price from being the fourth player to reach 1,000 yards in one season.

YORK, Neb. (P)—It was one trouble after another on the Lloyd Morgan farm. First the crops were damaged by hail. Then mink began raiding the Morgan henhouse, killing more than 120 baby chicks and two pump hens. So the Morgans set a trap for the mink. They caught the family cat.

KINGSTON, Canada (P)—Among carved symbols over the entrance to Adelaide Hall, new Girls' Residence center at Queen's University, are a group of musical notes from "The Mikado." A passing musician noted that the corresponding words are: "Brightly dawns our wedding day."

Quality In Mileage

There has been no mention of the fact that one of the greatest handicaps to efficient motoring is the high percentage of what is well labeled useless mileage. In this category are the drives to the corner store, the effort to park right in front of a shop instead of leaving the car a block away and walking, or riding around aimlessly just to kill time. No car benefits by such operation, and certainly the owner has little to show for the effort. Instead the car should be given more mileage on the open road at speeds which help it keep in trim. A hill is invariably an advantage since heating of the motor and pressure on the bearings will help to drive diluent out of the oil. If you doubt this just check with your family doctor. He has more trouble with sticky valves and hydraulic valve lifters than most of us, even though he buys good cars. It's just that he is forced by his profession to make short runs in which the engine hardly ever has a chance to warm up.

For Future Reference

Few will understand what you mean if you advance the theory that the rough idling of the engine of your car is due to a warped block or cylinder head. Many experienced mechanics have known this for a long time but the poor mating of the surfaces of these parts seldom is considered when an engine fails to respond to the usual remedies. Even warpage of the manifolds can spoil an otherwise good engine. What you get with warpage is chance of air leakage, slightly uneven compression and other irregularities which show up as a tendency for the idling engine to stumble.

Rough On Starters

While it is often necessary to open the throttle wide for a restart of a hot motor care should be taken not to allow it to race for more than an instant when it does fire. If the engine has a good wide throttle in cranking this may damage the starter drive gear. Object of the wide open throttle when trying to re-start is to permit the pistons to have access to more air. But the remedy is not Without its drawbacks.

I advise checking to see if the engine has a tendency to run too hot. Sometimes just reducing the operating temperature a little is sufficient to check the sluggish re-starting.

Mechanic Joe Speaking:

"One of the things you learn after fussing with cars for years is that whenever you're on the trail of trouble it pays to try one remedy at a time, never two together. If you try too many tricks at one time you are faced with a similar situation you're as much at sea as ever."

"Suppose you are having trouble warming up the motor. You may suspect that the choke control needs adjusting. At the same time there's a possibility that the motor thermostat isn't working or that there may be a too lean carburetor mixture. Now suppose you go after all three of these possibilities and then find that the engine warms up normally again. How do you know which of the cures really did the trick?"

Drop Those Lights

One of my thoughtful readers has joined with those who have asked me to urge motorists who trail other cars at night to make sure to drop headlights to the passing beam, but he adds the point that this will help prevent the oncoming drivers from blinding the man at the head of the line. These fellows think they are being dazzled by the head car lights, and so flip to the high beam to try to get some cooperation from its driver. He's already doing the best he can, and besides he has no way of asking the cooperation of those behind him.

One way to get out of this predicament is to slow down and let one of two cars behind pass by, but as the particular reader points out this often results in delay if the head man doesn't know the route.

Way Back In History

Not many wheel twirlers these days know that the first automobile to roll the streets of Detroit was one made by Charles King. It was a water-cooled four of four cylinders and four-cycle design. That was in 1896.

Not many recall that top drawer sports cars of the old days used to have a special seat on the side outside the main body of the car for the convenience of the chauffeur when the owner felt the urge to take the wheel.

Aids In Finding Parts

Owners of older cars who are having trouble obtaining parts should know that many shops use the Hollander Manual which lists over a half million interchanges. With this there is no need to grope or to trust to guess work since parts are identified by forging, casting and stamping numbers. Cars and trucks way back to 1933 are covered. The book is necessarily expensive, so if one shop isn't guided by it, try another. A surprising number of parts can be interchanged, but the guidance of a good manual is invaluable in knowing just how far you can go with substitutions.

Slogans That Save

Over the years AAA has achieved a great deal of success in its relentless war against carelessness by the use of common sense psychology in its safety slogans for children, many of whom now are the grown-ups. I remember one that has always impressed me because of its soundness. "Cross quickly" it says to the child who has the right of way and who is given the command by the officer in charge or by the traffic lights. That word "quickly" is the key to it. More and more people have learned the importance of making the crossing as brief as possible, checking that natural tendency to loiter when half way across the street. Such loitering overlooks the possibility of an unseen car coming around the corner or bobbing up from nowhere. Get going, keep going and don't stop until you are up on the sidewalk again.

Keep It In Mind

When removing wheel covers it is a good idea to spread the lap robe on the ground so that they won't be damaged if they slip out of your hand.

If in doubt as to whether bushings or shackles, anti-sway bars or other parts are metal or rubber you're safe if you try lubricating them with brake fluid. This won't harm rubber. While not as good a lubricant for metal as a petroleum product it may provide temporary relief from squeaking.

Q. What do you think of the practice of shifting to neutral from high gear without depressing the clutch pedal? R. R. E.

A. Since the transmission gears are asked to take enough punishment as it is I certainly do not advocate any such short cut. Press the pedal down and release the clutch plate fully.

Q. I notice that there is a grease fitting on the universal joint of my light truck. The instruction book says that no greasing is required. Then why the fitting? N. L. G.

A. The fitting was used during factory greasing.

Q. Do inner tubes have a tendency to slip when the brakes are applied suddenly? K. L. McB.

A. If there were any material slippage here the valve would be torn out. You will find that the inner tube clings so closely to the inside of the shoes, because of the air pressure, it becomes almost a part of the shoe.

Q. There is oil on the clutch plate of my car, due to leakage around the rear main engine bearing. Can this oil be cleaned off the clutch? J. N. B.

A. Yes, but as I say in my chapter on clutches in my new "Fred Russell's Car Care" book the clutch will shortly become oily again. You really don't solve anything, and if the clutch is taken down you are missing a bet by not also checking the engine oil leakage.

Q. The engine of my car never seems to develop any spark plug trouble, yet I am using a lot of oil. Sometimes in a 100-mile drive I have to add two quarts. No leakage has been detected, yet the fact that the plugs do not foul indicates that oil is not pumping up past the piston rings. Or am I wrong about this? T. N. C.

A. Yes, very wrong. An engine can be a terrific hog on oil without plug trouble. Much depends on how the car is driven. You take long, fast runs, apparently. You go down a long grade, and the pistons suck up oil. Then you hit a long upgrade and any oil that has lodged on the plugs is quickly burned off.

Q. Is it advisable to have the hood undercoated? I have heard this point argued, and should like to know the facts. J. J. H.

A. Yes, it is now believed that the hood should have a double undercoating. This is most effective in preventing the hood from amplifying engine noises.

Q. I notice that around town the engine of my car does not overheat. But as soon as I hit the open road there's trouble. L. H.

A. Probably a slightly clogged radiator or the lower water hose may collapse.

Mr. Russell will answer questions regarding the safe care and operation of your car. Just address him at 254 Fern St., West Hartford, 7, Conn., and enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply. There is no charge.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (P)—Freshman Dick Hearn is one of the University of Alabama's top prospects in baseball and basketball. The six-foot-three-inch, 190-pound athlete was a double figure scorer with the Crimson Tide's freshman cage squad and led the varsity baseball team in home runs and runs batted in this season.

VERSATILE DUKE PLAYERS

DURHAM, N. C. (P)—Six of the 20 players Duke sent to the NCAA baseball playoffs were top notch performers in other sports at the school. Dick Groat was an All-America star in basketball; Red Smith, Billy Lea and John Carroll were football backs; Dick Johnson excelled on the basketball court, and Jack Tarr was a soccer standout.

In Memoriam

In loving remembrance of our husband and father, who passed away one year ago today.
A precious one from us has gone. A voice we loved is stilled. A place is vacant in our home which never can be filled. God in His wisdom has recalled the boon His love had given. And though the body slumbers here The soul is safe in Heaven.

TV Fan Objects To False Teeth Display

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman televisioner of the Democratic convention called NBC Friday to complain about "that man on the platform who's always on TV whenever there's a speaker."

NBC explained that the gentleman was Representative Clarence Cannon of Missouri, perennial convention parliamentarian.

"I don't care who he is," she snapped, "but get rid of him. He's vulgar. He just took out his false teeth on TV. That's a new low in public, even for a Democrat."

nied him. He, however, insisted that his re-survey was merely confirming claims which he had before the temporary line had been established. The governors of the two provinces then began a correspondence about the matter, but without definite returns for nearly 20 years.

Meanwhile the settlers under the Pennsylvania warrants were kept in a state of constant uneasiness, a number of arrests were made, and violence followed.

Very shortly after Cookson's visit in April, 1746, during which he warned Digges to abide by the royal order, Thomas Morris, deputy sheriff of Baltimore County, Maryland, at the instance of John Digges, arrested Mathian Ulrich and Nicholas Forney, two of the German settlers on the disputed land. This was done because the men had failed to give Digges their bonds for the lands which they held, but under Pennsylvania warrants. If complied with, these men would have been compelled to pay to the same land.

The sheriff took his two prisoners as far as Adam Forney's house, in the limits of the present town of Hanover, Adam, the father of Nicholas Forney, remonstrated with the sheriff, insisting that the prisoners were lawfully settled under Pennsylvania warrants, and offered to go bail for them. This was refused, whereupon Forney told the men to return to their homes.

The sheriff drew his sword and Forney's party drew theirs, but no blows were exchanged, and the sheriff and his assistants, Dudley Digges and John Roberts, mounted their horses and rode away into undisputed Maryland territory. Adam Forney then wrote to Cookson, pleading for his intervention, but saying that if no relief came the settlers would help themselves and "should it be with our last drop of blood, for I am well assured that we will be put upon by no Digges that ever lived under the sun." He said further that Digges also troubled many more and was going to have them arrested.

The troubles grew worse as Digges discovered that the Germans were as determined as he. In an effort to break the opposition an under-sheriff from Maryland with six accompanying him, all armed with heavy clubs, arrested Adam Forney at his home and carried him off to Baltimore where he was committed to jail on the charge of resisting officers of the law.

He was subjected to very rough treatment, and in the struggle attending his arrest his wife, Louisa, and his daughter, Eve, were beaten with clubs. In Baltimore Forney entered bail for his appearance in court. The Pennsylvania provincial authorities at once came to his aid, and retained a Maryland lawyer to defend him. However, it was revealed that the house where Forney had been arrested was actually within the limits of Digges' original tract, and so the case ceased to interest the Pennsylvania authorities. How the case was settled in nowhere recorded, but it is probable that nothing more than a fine was imposed, for Forney was soon back home again.

During the week following Forney's arrest a formal complaint was sent by the German settlers to Cookson, setting forth the facts of Forney's arrest and pleading with Cookson to intercede with the governor to bring relief to them. Things seem to have quieted down for some time, as it was 1749 before a petition was presented to Governor Hamilton of Pennsylvania by Hendrik Seller (Sell) and 13 others, stating that they were settled on land included in Digges' re-survey of 1745, and that though they all had Pennsylvania warrants for their land, Digges was threatening to sue them unless they paid him 100 pounds, Maryland currency, or be forced from their lands, carried into Maryland and there imprisoned. The unsettled status continued until in 1752 the climax came in the fatal shooting of Dudley Digges, son of John. This resulted from an attempt to compel Martin Kitzmiller to acknowledge Digges' original right to a tract of land of 100 acres, on which were a mill and a blacksmith shop which lay entirely outside the limits of Digges' original survey, but within the bounds of his re-survey.

The tract is along the Hanover-Littlestown Rd., at the crossing of the Little Conewago Creek.

As Kitzmiller refused, the sheriff of Baltimore County, accompanied by several other persons, among them John Digges' sons, Henry and Dudley, went to Kitzmiller's will on February 26, 1752, and attempted to arrest Martin Kitzmiller. Kitzmiller resisted, and his sons came to his rescue. In the ensuing struggle, a gun in the hands of Jacob Kitzmiller was discharged, and Dudley Digges was fatally shot.

The Marylanders left the premises, and Jacob Kitzmiller went to York and delivered himself into custody. In 1749 this area had been cut off from Lancaster County and had become York County. John Digges appealed to the Maryland authorities for justice and the president of the Maryland council laid claim to jurisdiction in the case, and demanded that Kitzmiller be delivered for trial in Maryland.

The council of Pennsylvania established the fact that at the time of the royal order of 1739 Digges was not in possession of the land on which the tragedy took place, and therefore the trial was properly under Pennsylvania jurisdiction. The trial was ordered to be held on October 30, 1752, in York, and Maryland was invited to submit evidence that the place of shooting was under Maryland jurisdiction.

The decision of the court was that Pennsylvania had jurisdiction, and it appeared from the evidence that the shooting was an accident, so Jacob Kitzmiller and his father were acquitted. The president of the Maryland council in a letter to the governor of Pennsylvania before the trial dismissed the accidental nature of the shooting, saying that shooting a man in the back, after he had entreated another not to fire the gun, when he was leaving the scene, was hardly anything but murder.

This tragedy helped to sober all parties, and no further acts of violence took place, although the dispute continued until the Mason and Dixon line and the attendant agreements finally ended the controversy, even if it did not end all conflicting claims to land.

Many of the settlers sought to take unfair advantage of the vexed situation. Some had taken up land under Maryland titles, and thereby owed allegiance to Maryland, but refused to pay taxes to Maryland because they claimed that they were not sure the land was really under Maryland jurisdiction. At the same time, as citizens of Maryland, they refused to be taxed by Pennsylvania. That the whole situation was most unusual and irregular is shown by the success which some of them had in escaping taxes altogether, although these same persons did not hesitate to appeal to either jurisdiction, as they thought it would suit their immediate purpose.

Not all were of this mind, however, though they were also puzzled as to their proper status. Finally on February 18, 1757, the matter was referred to the grand jury of York County, which ordered all to confirm to the royal order of 1739, and show allegiance to the province from which they received their titles which they themselves considered valid.

As stated, while the Mason and Dixon line settled the question of jurisdiction and paved the way for a final untangling of all the knots involved, disputed over individual claims continued for some years. As one historian of York County, John Gibson, says: "There was no place in the whole history of Pennsylvania where so many intricate points of law came up for discussion and decision concerning land titles, as around Hanover."

SHOULD SAVE CONVENTION AS MUSEUM PIECE

(Editor's note: Trellis Mae Feeble, America's most average wife, is a casualty of the most exciting session of the National Donkey Serenade.)

By HAL BOYLE
CHICAGO (AP)—Dear Wilbur, There is only one thing to be done with the 31st National Democratic Convention.

It ought to be stuffed—delegates and all—then covered with wax and put on permanent exhibit in the American Museum of Natural History. Otherwise, posterity will never believe it really existed.

I guess I should have stood in bedlam yesterday. And that is what I did do, dear darling, for some 14 mad nightmare hours while the donkey delegates brayed for 11 leaders—including shy Adlai Stevenson—then tried to kick each other to pieces.

All Set For Draft
The program, bearing a secret White House seal, called for the nomination of Stevenson for the presidency after decent funeral sermons for the other candidates. The stage had been properly set for the weather effects Gov. Stevenson had demanded—a strong and irresistible draft.

"The galleries are full of Illinois state employees blowing as hard as they can," said a cynical Kefauver supporter. "If Adlai wants a draft—well, Jake Arvey will give him a hurricane."

For your information, dear Jake Arvey is a local Chicago statesman—ranking somewhere between George Washington and Tom Pendergast.

Fighting Civil War
But instead of saddling Stevenson with the unwanted burden his enemies say he has been impatiently waiting for, the delegates went back to their favorite sport—fighting the Civil War all over.

They started voting to throw Virginia out of the convention, but when they found they had enough votes to do it, they got scared and started voting against the idea. After deciding to keep Virginia, they started to throw away South Carolina and Louisiana.

Wilbur, it was just like your relatives at a family reunion—everybody screaming and nobody listening. Then, in the midst of a flaming speech by Gov. Jimmy Byrnes, a nearby newspaper caught fire.

The Firemen Came
Everybody got excited. The firemen came then. They didn't have so much trouble putting out the blaze as they did pushing back some Michigan democrats who were huffing and puffing like mad trying to spread the flames and set fire to the South Carolina delegates.
